

Poetry Series

Pacific
Scott R. Welvaert

Star-crossed lovers set out to fulfill their dying wish: see the Pacific Ocean. To reach their destination, they must accept their fates and the mistakes of past choices.

Gigs
John Davis

Blues in D minor, big bellies over factory belts, and Elvis Presley license plates—Gigs is a collection of poems that shows us the gentle beauty of ordinary life.

Mama Joy
Eileen Silver-Lilywhite

As a narrative of a women's life, Eileen's poems are searing with love and loss, and the ineffable surprises we all experience.

Prose Series

The Prostitutes of Post Office Street
Frank F. Carden

Post Office Street drops readers into the red-light district of Galveston, where crooked cops and down-on-their-luck prostitutes dwell

Well Deserved
Michael Loyd Gray

Well Deserved chronicles the struggles of four people as they come to the stark and frightening realization that their lives hinge on one shared moment.

The Town of Watered-Down Whiskey
Jim Geiwitz

In The Town of Watered-Down Whiskey, Geiwitz taps into the nostalgia and claustrophobia of living in Smalltown, America.

Upper Midwest Writers Series

Bodywearers
Connie Colwell Miller

Miller's voice is filled with a revealing breathe of candor as her poems draw our attention to the small details in nature and the beauty of our bodies.

My Father's Gloves
David Speiring

With a hauntingly painful voice, Speiring explores the burdensome yoke of a father's expectations and the struggles a son must face as he grows into manhood.

The Baseball Diet Book
Pat Ryan

Ryan's short stories embrace those odd, both humorous and serious, moments in life and portrays a reality not many of us know.
